Clinical Ethics Consultants and Bioethics Committees: What's the Difference?

A Conversation on Healthcare Ethics in Different Hospital Systems

Hospital ethics committees in the United States began in the 1960s and have since rapidly expanded in hospitals across the world. However, there is much variation on what a hospital ethics committee does, how it should do it, and who is qualified to do it. This webinar is an invitation for those interested in healthcare ethics to dialogue with healthcare leaders about the different ways ethics can be provided to hospitals and hospital systems of different needs and sizes. A lengthy Q and A time will follow brief presentations by each of the speakers.

Objectives

1. Explain the evolution of the healthcare bioethics committee
2. Define the scope and practice of clinical ethics
3. Describe different mechanisms of how healthcare ethics consultations are provided in healthcare systems of different sizes
